The Telephone.

The world stood still for a thousand years, And crept for a thousand more, This wonderful world with wings for ears, Like the Messenger-god of yore-And winged feet and winged wand, And a wing on its either hand, And more than Mercury wore.

It bridles and rides a furnace's foal, With iron and hammer for sire. Great clouds of white from their nostrils roll, And it feeds its horses fire ! They are blooded stock, the engines swift, Beneath their heels the distance drifts, Like snows from the Arctic Pole !

They rattle across meridian lines, And down the parallels play, They marry together the palms and pines, A thousand miles in a day.

The world has trained a wonderful wire. A nerve of a route for articulate fire, And taught the lightnings to say : Dear Mary, be mine !"-" Car load of swine"-

"One ton of cheese"-" Maria dead"-"Joy ! It's a boy"-" I'm coming to dine"-"Send soap !"-" She's married to Fred." The humblest of words like angels fly A thousand miles in the flash of an eye, You hear before they are said !

What happened at ten you known at nine, And you away in the West, They distance along the lightning line The sun in his golden rest. They talk to-day in audible tone, The telegraph turns the telephone,

And parted lovers are blest ! Think of a girl in a lonely hour, No beau in a forty miles. She sits by the tube of talking power, She thinks a minute and smiles. " I'll call my John," you fancy her say. "He lives but a hundred miles away,

And banish the weary whiles." Behold them at the ends of the line, This John and his black-eyed boon; His head and hers to the wire incline, And she sings him Bonny Doon. He sighs for the only thing amiss,

He has no voice, but then he can-kiss ! He might as well be in the moon! For emptier than the east wind's laugh Is a lover's kiss by telegraph !

-Benj. F. Taylor, in Syracuse Journal.

VARIETY.

Rev. David Keppel sets forth in the Northern Christian Advocate his views on hell. He believes that hell " is a well regulated prison, in morality second only to heaven." If the system of credits for good behavior obtains there, it isn't such a terrible place, after all. By helping to put out a fire, for instance, a prisoner might have a few thousand years knocked off his sentence, or be fully pardoned and restored to heavenly citizen-

Arizona Citizen: Huntington met Scott recentiy, and after alluding to the bridge across the Colorado, thus delivered himself in the classic language of the Pacific; "I'm a son of a gun frem Bitter creek; I'm a wolf, and this is my night to howl! I've two rows of upper teeth, and nary a tooth alike! The folks on Bitter creek are bad; the higher up you go the was they are, and I'm from the headwaters."

A gentleman, whose place of business is not a thousand miles from the Merchants' Exchange, is annoyed, as many business men are, by impecunious individuals desiring small loans. He has adopted the following method of dealing with them. He will listen amicably to the long preface to, " Just lend me five dollars for a few days," and answers," Certainly," and then, turning to a clerk, says: " James, we have five dollars to lend, have we

"Yes; sir," says well-trained James. " Well, lend it to Mr. Beet."

" It is not in, sir, you loaned it to Mr. Bummer day before yesterday." " Ah, yes; so I did. Well, when it comes in lend it to Mr. Beet;" and bowing to the borrower the merchant resumes his business, and the needy one walks dejectedly out to try a more profitable place. A good story is told of a Washington belle, who is noted for her wit. She is the daughter of a distinguished judge, and at a recent dinner party was seated next to a gentleman who had recently lost a case before her father, and who took occasion to refer to him in terms anything but complimentary. An awful pause in the conversation indicated that something was wrong, when he turned to the lady at his side and expressed a hope that the judge was no relation of hers. To the great amusement of those present, " Oh, no; only a connection of my mother's by marriage.' A laugh could not be prevented, and the gentleman came slowly to the conclusion that the judge's family was too much for him.

A charming new song. Lovers of the chaste and emotional ballad are having a series of unexampled refreshment. Each day seems to offer them some rarely equaled gem, and the cry is "still they come." One of the sweetest of the later publications is, "Call me when the hash is ready." We cannot refrain from quoting a " Daisy, Darling! do not wake me Ere the murphies you do peed, Ere you've chopped the scraps and leavin's Of our yestereven's meal; Wake me not to pangful waitings, Do not serve me so again ; But when once the hash is ready, Gentle spirit, call me then."

Every patient husband who has endured the hardship of being called up before breakfast was ready, will canonize the author of this melody, and the wife of that husband will have cannon eyes for him whenever he sings it.

A man who lost his good character some time hauled over by some of his forago was severely mer friends. "I know it, boys. I know my character's gone, lost entirely. And," he added, rather pointedly, " it's too confounded bad, for it was the only one in the place worth saving." Boy (reading)—" And as she sailed down the river—" Teacher—" Why are ships called she?" Boy (precociously alive to the responto manage them.

A little six year-old New York boy was watching the sunbeams as they shot through the window and danced diagonally across the room. " Mamma," said he, " what are those streaks?" "Those, my boy," she replied, "are sunbeams from heaven." "Oh, I know what they are for, mamma," said the little boy, who had been sliding down beams in the barn loft, "they are what God slides the babies down on, when he sends 'em to folks." "Where can I find an example of a beautiful life?"-Eveline. We don't know that we catch your meaning exactly; but if we do, you can find three or four examples right here in this office. None of the scribes in this office ever hurled their mother-in-law down the cellar stairs; they never went into bankruptcy; they never had an office in a building and land association : they never belonged to the poor board or the fire commission: mone of 'em ever were aldermen: and although they don't pay their bills, they receive and file them regularly. If this sort of thing usn't an instance of a beautiful life, we don't
